Research and scholarships

In my applied research activities at Laimburg Research Centre, I cover most relevant topics related to grassland farming (in brackets the number of ongoing or concluded projects on the topic during the last 10 years):

- Yield, forage quality and long-term ecological sustainability of permanent meadows in dependence of grassland management (fertilisation, timing of cut) and meteorological factors (i.e. drought) (4).
- Development of a cost-saving, user-friendly, web-based, GIS-supported tool for the on-line estimation of the potential forage quality of permanent meadows at the first cut based on management, meteorology and botanical factors (webGRAS). Innovative element: exploiting the opportunities of EDP and GIS to provide farmers with customized, readily implementable information (4).

- Potential of grazing management in the South Tyrolean and European context (3).

- Development of an insurance system against drought damages based on meteorological and/or remote sensing data (3)

- Study of the costs of forage production depending on altitude and steepness of mountain grassland (participatory study in cooperation with local farmers) (2).

- Cultivar testing of relevant grassland forage species (Festuca arundinacea, Dactylis glomerata, Trifolium pratense) (4).

- Optimization and field test of seed mixtures for the establishment of permanent meadows and temporary grassland in mountain environment (7).

- Storage, treatment and application of farmyard manure (1).

Statement of interest Grassland management is the main topic of my current applied research at the Laimburg Research Centre. I would be happy to contribute to qualify the students of EMMA in the field of mountain agriculture with special reference to grassland management. During my activities at the Laimburg Research Centre I covered most grassland related topics (see the Research and Scholarship" section). I have good knowledge of this subject concerning both the local practice (see also the section "Memberships") and the scientific knowledge related to it. I already taught this topic in the past within EMMA (4 academic years) and the BSc course (3 academic years) at the Free University of Bolzano-Bozen with above-average evaluations of the students; I have also already tutored or co-tutored 14 degree thesis in total (see the section "Experience in academic teaching" and the course evaluations attached to this application).
