

Gilbert Silvius

HU University of Applied Sciences Utrecht, the Netherlands, Wittenborg University of Applied Sciences, the Netherlands, and University of Johannesburg, South Africa.

Gilbert Silvius is professor of applied sciences at Wittenborg University of Applied Sciences in the Netherlands, associate professor at HU University of Applied Sciences Utrecht and visiting professor at the University of Johannesburg in South Africa. He has authored several books and over 50 academic journal articles, and a recognized expert in the field of sustainability in project management. For his work on this topic, Gilbert received the GPM 2013 sustainability award and an 2020 outstanding contribution IPMA research award.

As a practitioner, Gilbert has over 30 years' experience in organizational change and IT projects and is a member of the international enable2change network of project management experts. Gilbert holds a PhD degree in information sciences from Utrecht University and masters' degrees in economics and business administration. He is also a certified project manager, scrum master and product owner