| Course description:                                    | Musical paleography involves collecting and describing examples of old music notation, dating them, deciphering them and translating them into modern notation, and publishing the deciphered version with scholarly comments.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Specific educational objectives:                       | The aim of the course is to give students an understanding of the aims, methods and problems of palaeography and its main uses in the field of philology and historical research. It also examines its methodological characteristics and the specific problems relating to musical palaeography. Students are encouraged to learn the terminology used in this discipline and to be able to transcribe mensural notation as it developed from the 15th to the 16th century. |

| Learning outcomes:                                   | At the end of the course, students will be able to do their ancient music transcriptions with the understanding of the semiological context, the modern meter, and solve the problems posed by the different pieces and manuscripts. They will also need to be able to integrate their knowledge, manage the complexity of paleographic and philological issues in order to create a critical edition in line with the most up-to-date scientific standards. Teaching will leave room for self-managed and autonomous study.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Assessment:                                          | Numerous transcription exercises are provided during the course with frequent audits of each student's personal work, individual and collegial discussions and corrections. The exam is written and consists of a modern transcription of a polyphonic piece from the Trent codices of the XVth century not analyzed during lesson.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Evaluation criteria and criteria for awarding marks: | The final vote will take into account the work done during the course by the student (number and quality of the transcriptions) and the correctness of the written exam.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
