Course description:	This course aims to familiarise PhD students with academic research conventions and academic discourse in English, in both spoken and written contexts. Participants will learn how to formulate research questions and a thesis statement, how to present an argument, how to structure paragraphs for coherence and cohesion, how to write an abstract in English for an academic audience and aspects of effective oral presentations. Genre and corpus approaches will be used to heighten learners' awareness of academic language in use, through such observation skills as validating, formulating and checking hypotheses about the rhetorical structures and language characterising academic genres. Corpus work will contribute to learning by 'noticing' or 'discovery', encouraging students to adopt an inductive approach in analysing academic language. At the end of the course, students will produce an abstract for a short oral presentation and give the presentation in front of an audience.
Specific educational objectives:	By the end of the 20-hour course on "English for academic purposes" students will be able to do the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • identify and analyse the conventions for academic discourse with appropriate genre features • use corpus tools to improve their own writing • write an abstract in English demonstrating critical awareness of generic conventions and academic discourse style • deliver an effective oral presentation in front of an audience
List of topics covered:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Academic writing and its conventions • Linguistic features of academic writing in English • Aspects of reading for academic writing • Exploiting basic corpus techniques to explore academic language • Compiling a corpus representative of academic language use • Developing arguments • Structure of abstracts • Use of English in academic writing for educational research • Structuring oral presentations

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Using effective linking phrases during oral presentations • Make effective use of presenting software such as PowerPoint
Teaching format:	Lecture, workshop, seminar, discussion, individual work
