Dorothy Louise Zinn is Professor of Sociocultural Anthropology at the Free University of Bozen-Bolzano, where she is currently the Coordinator of the PhD program in Education and Social Sciences. Prof. Zinn is also Vice-Director of the Competence Centre for Social Work and Social Policy and head of the Centre's research focus on Aging, Care, Diversity, Gender and Migration. Prof. Zinn is originally from the United States, where she did her academic training. She has conducted fieldwork in Southern Italy and South Tyrol and has published extensively on issues such as immigration and multiculturalism, migrant-origin youths, gender-based violence, clientelism and corruption, and youth unemployment. Her research interests also include the anthropology of education, institutions, policy, and research methods. Inspired by famed anthropologist Bronislaw Malinowski's presence in South Tyrol, in 2016 Prof. Zinn co-founded the Malinowski Forum for Ethnography and Anthropology (MFEA) at the Free University of Bozen-Bolzano (<https://mfea.projects.unibz.it/>). Her book La raccomandazione (Donzelli, 2001) won a Pitré international award in anthropology, and she has translated a number of anthropological texts from Italian into English, including three classic ethnographic monographs by Italian ethnologist Ernesto de Martino. She is currently President of the Society for the Anthropology of Europe (SAE) and Delegate to the World Council of Anthropological Associations (WCAA). Prof. Zinn is engaged with the local territory, serving as a volunteer scientific consultant with migrant advocacy association Donne Nissà Frauen and UPAD Bolzano, and she is an editorialist with Il Corriere dell'Alto Adige of the Italian newspaper Corriere della Sera.
