- Summary of significant personal achievements in teaching: The personal achievements during the teaching activity had very positive results, what is also confirmed by the good evaluations of the courses. In most cases these were new workshops or new lectures of its kind for the Ladin Section of the Faculty of Education, a stimulating and at the same time challenging aspect, which allowed me to create specific teaching material and to set up a specific corpus for the courses, useful and necessary above all for the lesson of "First-Language Acquisition and Teaching", which until now had not been studied.

- Summary of significant achievements in research and scholarship
The current projects, as well as those already concluded, contributed to important results for Dolomitic Ladin, most of them already published in different contributions. In particular, the AcuiLad project provided an insight into various aspects of language acquisition in multilingual contexts that had not been studied so far. The project on the normative grammar of Ladin had and still has positive results, both in the didactic field – since didactic material for the Ladin schools have been developed – and in the field of linguistic standardisation and documentation. The elaboration of a standard grammar enables to investigate on many linguistic questions that until now represented a scientific gap.

Statement of interest

My teaching and research activities over the last few years had important and scientifically interesting impacts in the field of Ladin linguistics and didactics as well as on the research on multilingualism. The positive results are reflected in the publications and research projects that emerged, as well as in the good course evaluations. The scientific discussion on topics related to the acquisition and teaching of Ladin as L1 and L2 still needs further research, a task that clearly fits to my professional and personal profile. The coordination of the projects AcuiLad and Junde! and the coordination of the PRIN-project MinEdu enabled me to create an important and fundamental basis for research into the processes of language acquisition in the Ladin and multilingual context. My research interests are not limited to teaching and acquisition issues, but as can be seen from the CV, also integrates topics of sociolinguistics and linguistics, thus topics that also fall within the scientific profile of the Ladin Section. The publications of these topics have contributed to broaden the scientific research around Ladin and questions on multilingualism in general.
