Art. 1

Object of the selection procedures

- 1) The Free University of Bolzano, hereinafter referred to as University, announces four selection procedures for the awarding of four fixed-time research assistant contracts for collaboration at research activity for the faculty and disciplinary-scientific sectors hereafter indicated.

Faculty of Economics and Management

Disciplinary-scientific sector: SECS-P/05 (Econometrics)

Competition Sector: 13/A5 (Econometrics)

Title of research project: Bayesian econometrics and applications to macroeconomic and finance problems with large data

Description of the research activity: Inference with large sets of data is a topic of substantial interest to academic researchers as well as to professional and applied forecasters. The recent fast growth in (real-time) big data allows researchers to model and predict variables of interest more accurately and suggests that there are large potential gains from using a large set of variables instead of a single univariate time series models in many inference applications. The current project aims to build new large macroeconomic and financial database and to derive new Bayesian methods to estimate high dimensional, and possibly nonlinear, time series models on these large datasets. The models which will be considered include: Bayesian nonparametric models, large Markov-switching panel data models, predictive density combination models. The applications will focus on electricity prices.

Minimum curricular requirements necessary in order to carry out the research with details of the Scientific and professional profile required for the research activity:

- Degree preferably in Economics, Statistics or Mathematics
- knowledge of Econometrics/Statistics evidenced by passed exams or publications

Competition Sector: 13/B2 (Management)

Title of research project: Innovation and social capital in family firms

Description of the research activity: While research on innovation in family business is gaining momentum, how family ownership and management affect innovation processes is still largely overlooked. The success of innovation is fundamentally affected by the processes enacted by people in searching, developing and applying ideas in R&D projects, and the organizational context in which such processes occur is likely to play a significant role. Furthermore, the social capital - relationships and resource available through those connections – that organizational actors are able to mobilize within and outside the boundaries of the firm are fundamental to boost innovation.

This research aims at examining the following broad questions: How does family influence affect the way innovation occurs and/or is managed? How does the social capital of family firms' members shape the innovation process?

This project will particularly focus on the key actors involved in the family and in the business systems that characterize a family business. This research will offer insights to both theory and practice by shedding light on the family businesses' innovation processes and offering suggestions for enhancing innovation performance in family firms.
